Hi Officer Shepherd,

I'm following up from our earlier conversation regarding the alleged bite from my dog, Buster. As I mentioned, my fiancée and I were both present during all of Maria's interactions with Buster and there is footage of the entire interaction. I simply don't believe there was a bite. He clearly snapped at her, but I don't see any place that he made contact, she never mentioned anything at the time, no physical or audible reaction to anything, and no marks on any of her clothes or extremities in the video. The conversation at the end was on whether we were interested in her providing dog walking services, feeding him treats by hand, letting him lick her face and laughing - I just don't see how any of those conversations and mannerisms could have ensued after a bite. We were shocked, to say the least, to hear her claim that she was bit when we got a text from her later that night. Even if there was adrenaline, as you mentioned, then I'd imagine there would have been some physical reaction to get it flowing, but I don't see any in the videos.

The links below are to the video files. They are direct from Ring, but I did notice that the one video where Buster made a move gets frozen on the download, but it is clear on my screen, so I took a screenshot and sent that in an additional link from my Amazon Photos account.
